Extract parallel contour

After pattern selection, the icon of "Extract parallel contour" function become enable.

Contour offset

Input contour offset (cm) :

-0.3

OK Cancel

After you click on "Extract parallel contour" button a dialog window will open: "Contour offset". In this window you must introduce the distance between original contour and extracted contour. After introducing the value you must press OK button to apply the function. If you want to close this dialog window without creating a new pattern with parallel contour you must press Cancel button.

If you set a positive value, the new pattern will have the contour drawn outside of reference pattern; the new pattern will be bigger. If you set a negative value, the new pattern will have the contour drawn inside of reference pattern; the new pattern will be smaller.

reference contour

parallel contour

The new pattern will be extracted overlapped on reference pattern. In this example, to obtain the new pattern it was used a negative value.

reference contour

The new resulted pattern will be graded and will have seam allowance as the reference pattern. If the reference pattern was designed on cut line, the new extracted pattern will be set also as designed on cut line.

For better results on extraction it is recommended to use real values, according to the purposes of this function. After extracting a new pattern using this function it is recommended to interpolate it. In order to interpolate the new pattern you can use Interpolation function from "Pattern" tool or segment interpolation from "Shape" tool. By interpolation the point number from pattern contour will be reduced and the curves will become smooth.

1.5.15 Cut off a pattern with another (Trim)

In order to obtain complex models patterns derived from base patterns, you can execute various operations between the patterns.

A pattern can be cut off with another one, with a drawing which can be constructed from one or more segments (straight, curved), or with a shape contour taken from another pattern (extracts with "Trace mode-drawing following the contour of the existing patterns", see chapter 1.7.23).

to cut off a pattern with another

Cutting off a pattern with another one

In order to cut a pattern with another one it is necessary to select two patterns overlapped in a desired position. The first selected pattern will be the cutting pattern while the second selected pattern will be the trimmed one. The first selected pattern will cut from the second one the contour zone which intersects between them.
